The Trainer—Mark Burns

Mark brings a wealth of experience from his twelve years of teaching. His keen appreciation about what motivates people to learn and engage lies at the core of his training. He has worked extensively delivering and coaching on the TES Training Award shortlisted "Outstanding teaching" intervention in schools nationwide for the past 5 years. Through this work, observing more than a thousand lessons in both primary and secondary schools, he has gained a keen understanding of the key ingredients required to transform learning in the classroom so that it is active, high in challenge, collaborative and student-led. His work in helping to develop teaching and learning has helped individual teachers, as well as schools to 'level up' as judged by Ofsted. Mark was shortlisted for the TES Training Award 2010 for his work with a school confronting major organisational change. In 2012 he co-wrote the well received book 'Outstanding Teaching: Engaging Learners' and last year he co-wrote 'Outstanding Teaching: Teaching Backwards' which provide the 'what, why and how?' to level up engagement and progress in lessons. Mark is heavily involved in training and consultancy to school leaders seeking to improve the quality of teaching and learning.
